

Web Based Image Management and Enhancement System

A. Ranaweera and B. A. K. Dissanayake

Uva Wellassa University, Sri Lanka

Image Editing is an interesting area of the modern world. Traditionally the function has been carried out by the use of local computer which is even today also being done. As the users get familiar with the technologies, they tend to achieve easy ways of doing things. With the use of internet, the number of people using internet has been increased. This paper addresses the common limitations of traditional photo editing methods and the potential of using a web based image editing solution as this would provide some important features, Efficiency, Security, Efficiency etc. Java is a powerful language which contains number of facilities that would encourage image editing. By finishing this project users will be provided with the ability of maintaining their image albums and edit images as required.

Key words: Web based image management